Our Founders

The Good Directions story begins in 1982 when John Lodato decided to expand his regionally renowned relics and restoration business - United Housewrecking - to establish a company devoted to enhancing the home with affordable, uniquely crafted products that would reflect a homeowner's particular style and personality. Combining his expertise in historical design with his son Michael's background in manufacturing and materials, the two created Good Directions.

They began with a line of weathervanes and cupolas, becoming the first in their industry to implement wide-scale production and design. Sticklers for quality and customer service, Good Directions sought out the finest artists and artisans to create products that were not only functional but beautiful, soon gaining a reputation for the finest designs in the industry.

John Lodato and Michael Lodato

Today, with Michael at the helm, Good Directions has expanded its line to include a wide range of decorative yet functional products for home and garden, including popular FireDomes™, rain chains and garden weathervanes. The company continues to attract innovative artists and designers eager to lend their vision to the creation of exceptional products to enhance the home, both indoors and out. No matter which way the wind blows, you can count on Good Directions to lead the way to a beautiful home.

Our Products

The Good Directions Difference

With a reputation for the best and most beautiful products in the industry, Good Directions invests a great deal of time in researching designs and working with artists. When your customer purchases a Good Directions product, it is with the assurance that the same artist who created the design followed it through every step of the manufacturing and production process.

At Good Directions, our service guarantee doesn't end at the point of purchase. With exceptional after-sale support, our customer service department is available to answer any questions you or your customer might have about our products: installation, technical specifications, assembly, troubleshooting - just call 1-800-852-3002 and a specialist will provide step-by-step directions. Good Directions!

Weathervanes

Good Directions is the only weathervane provider in the country selected by the esteemed Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. to design and sell the Smithsonian® Collection by Good Directions line of distinctive weathervanes; each one authorized to include the distinctive logo.

Your customers view their beautiful homes as their crowning achievements. By offering them the advantage to crown it with a Good Directions weathervane, they will have an adornment unsurpassed in style, quality and durability. Our handcrafted weathervanes add a touch of elegance and are the ultimate symbol of American tradition and craftsmanship. Our artisans use Old World techniques to forge copper, brass and other metals into functional works of art that will stand the test of time.

Materials:

- Copper, brass and aluminum
- Blue Verde or polished finish
- Weather-resistant powder-coated assembly rod

Mounting:

Although Good Directions Weathervanes can be traditionally mounted to most rooftops using a roof mount, there are many other ways to display a weathervane, including:

- Vinyl or wood cupolas
- Eave mounts
- Indoor floor & tabletop/mantel display bases
- Garden poles

One of our knowledgeable Weathervane Specialists would be happy to assist you in making your display and mounting decisions.

Important Cupola Information

Cupolas and weathervanes make great-looking additions to homes and other buildings. Although most of our cupolas are purchased as decorative accents, they are also functional and can be used for ventilation. Take a few moments to review the information presented here to help your customer select the right cupola.

Cupola Notes

- All cupolas come in three sections - roof, middle and base - for easy installation and delivery.
- Made from solid PVC vinyl or cypress and pine veneer wood.
- Topped with 16-ounce 24-gauge copper.
- Detailed installation guide included with every cupola.
- All vinyl cupolas can be painted.
- All wood cupolas can be painted or stained.
- Cupola size is derived from the measurement of the roof's edge.
- Cupolas come weathervane-ready with mounting hardware built inside each one.
- Primer and screening options available (see price list for details).

Extension Bases

Vinyl and Wood Cupolas: Our Vinyl and Wood Cupolas are designed for a roof pitch up to a 10" rise per foot (known as "10/12 pitch"); most roofs are not steeper than this. However, if the roof pitch is steeper than a 10/12 pitch, you will need to include an extension base with your cupola order (see price list for extension base information). It is important that you order your extension base (if needed) at the same time you order your cupola.

To measure your roof use a carpenter's framing square as shown. Check square with a level and record the "rise."

See Price List or call for Extension Base Prices.

Cupolas

Selecting Cupola Size

In selecting the right size cupola for a building, a good rule of thumb is: 1.5 inches of cupola for every foot of unbroken roof line. The key here is the unbroken roof line measurement (see charts below). For example: if a roof section measures 24 feet, the minimum cupola size should be approximately 36 inches square. For a more dramatic effect, or if a cupola larger than 60 inches square is needed, consider using two cupolas on the roof line. When using more than one cupola per roof line, a good rule of thumb is one inch of cupola for every foot of unbroken roof line (see chart below). For example: if a roof section measures 24 feet, the minimum size of each cupola should be approximately 24 inches square.

Cupola Size Chart for one cupola per roof line:

Your Roof Line	Cupola Size	Your Roof Line	Cupola Size
up to 12 feet	18 inches or larger	25 to 28 feet	42 inches or larger
13 to 15 feet	22 inches or larger	29 to 32 feet	48 inches or larger
16 to 18 feet	26 inches or larger	33 to 36 feet	54 inches or larger
19 to 20 feet	30 inches or larger	over 36 feet	60 inches or 2 cupolas
21 to 24 feet	36 inches or larger

Cupola Size Chart for two or more cupolas per roof line:

Your Roof Line	Cupolas' Size	Your Roof Line	Cupolas' Size
up to 18 feet	18 inches	37 to 42 feet	42 inches
19 to 22 feet	22 inches	43 to 48 feet	48 inches
23 to 28 feet	26 inches	49 to 54 feet	54 inches
29 to 30 feet	30 inches	55 to 60 feet	60 inches*
31 to 36 feet	36 inches

*For roof lines larger than 60 feet, additional cupolas can be added.

How It Works

Simply coil your garden hose into the hose pot for effortless, snare-free storage between waterings. The raised interior base helps guide the hose within the container, while multiple drainage holes eliminate excess water. A convenient side hole allows the hose to be easily connected to an outdoor faucet.

Rain Chains

Originating hundreds of years ago in Japan, Rain Chains act as linked funnels and are a decorative alternative to a cheerless gutter downspout. Rainwater playfully dances and flows down these handcrafted copper and aluminum channels as it is guided from the rooftop to the ground. Your customers will pray for rain once they attach their Rain Chain.

One of our most popular items, our pure copper and aluminum rain chains in a broad selection of styles and finishes will appeal to every taste. A natural patina will develop on the polished copper styles over time, adding to the character and charm of these delightful chains.

Rain Chains

Easy Installation

To attach your Rain Chain:

Rain Chain
attaches right
to clip.

Simply insert the included Gutter
Installation Clip
into your gutter.
Clip is flexible and
can be easily bent
to fit any gutter.

Rain Chains
can be combined
to achieve
any length.

Use optional
decorative catch basin at bottom to contain the rain
as it trickles down
the Rain Chain.
